Career Counseling Talk on Job Oriented Computer Courses

On 18.11.2017

Need

Most of the our students after graduation want to learn a skill based course because they come from economically backward family and want to support their families earning something else as early as possible. So, most of them get into computer based courses having easy entrance and affordable fees structure without going to in depth analysis on employable opportunities of the same. Discussion made with some employers who recruit workers with computer skill, it has been observed that in the job market there is always a lack in demand quality and supply qualities of the workers who have already completed computer courses. Different computer courses have different job opportunities. In market, if there is demand computer worker having knowledge of hands on skill in the line of printing, but there is over supply of PGDC obtainner having little knowledge on type setting and editing and the allies. This mismatch cannot meet the requirement of early job engagement. Computer knowledge for clerical job though matters, but job opportunities in this line is not at par. Some computer courses help the learners to get self-employability. On this, back drop, department of economics organized a counseling programme on job-oriented computer courses on 18.11.2017.

Resource Person

To grace this occasion Mr. Devojyoti Borah, the chief director of UnikaPrakashan and a regular popular column writer on the line of computer and digital world as well as electronic opportunities. He is also winner GhonshyamGoswami award for his literary contribution in computer and digital world. He has also got published more than 8 books in this line.

Opening of the Session

On the day of the programme there were 40students participants and 6 faculties. The senior most teacher of the department of Economics, Bahona College Mrs. Binoda Borah presided over the programme and the invitee preetiBordoloi, the retired head of the department of Chemistry and also retired principal-in-charge of the college inaugurated the programme by explaining the need of such counseling programme. She also encouraged the students to take such opportunities provided by the college before they going out. Such programmes would make them to be more practical fitting with the need of the job market. With thesewords

Mrs. Bordoloi declared inauguration of the programme. Mrs. Purnima Bordoloi, the retired HOD of Zoology department of the college shared her experienced with the participants.

Deliberation of Resource Person

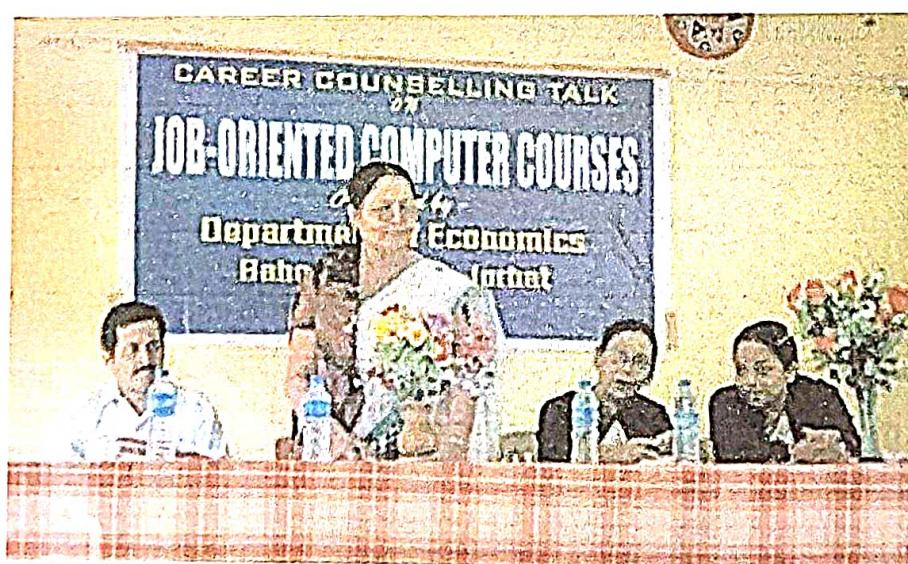

Mr. Devojyoti Borah in his deliberation categorically explained different courses of computer available in neighbouring localities. He also pointed out the length of the courses, the cost of the courses and the job opportunities behind the courses. He analyzed the computer courses which have the chance of self-employability. Lastly he mentioned in which areas in Jorhat city lacks what type of computers and where. He pointed out the COC on Computer Based Printing run by the Bahona College is most suitable for developing employability in the area of printing. Four students made some queries on the utility of some computer courses and genuinity of some private institutions providing computer courses. Mr. Bora clarified with examples all the queries.

Conclusion

Mrs. Binoda Bora, at the end of the session thanked the resource person for his fruitful deliberation and also all the participants and the chief guests making the session successful.

Outcomes

The aforesaid programme helped the participants to choose the path of computer courses after graduation. They have gathered knowledge not only on the courses, but also their expenditure and job opportunities. Thus they were able to modify their goals and making themselves ready for it in advance. Because of this the enrolment of COC of Computer based printing increased.
